Heidi Gottlieb (COM'81) walked 250 miles, from her front door in Port Washington, N.Y., to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, Mass., to raise awareness about brain cancer. Heidi, a brain cancer survivor, was treated at Mass General in 2008 and is founder and director of the nonprofit charity Brain Matters. She set out on October 1, walking about 10 miles each day along Boston Post Road and talking about her cause at schools. She is pictured here walking along the Charles River. "I arrived at the 'You Are Entering Boston' sign on October 29," she says. "Four years ago on that same day, I was packing my bag to check into the hospital for brain surgery. Reading that sign, knowing I had walked there—it brought me to tears." Heidi arrived at Mass General on November 1. Learn more about her organization at www.brain-matters.org.
